

Fulcrum Search Science Inc. REFERENCES

Good references are critical in securing a new opportunity in today's market. It is best to have at least one current/former supervisor listed among your references, and three references in total.

Never take your references for granted and always notify them before you give your references out to the potential employer for calling.

Remember, a good reference can mean the difference between an employer choosing you versus your competitor.

by Joe Braccia, Vice President